

Twenty Years of KINEMA

By The Editor

Spring 2013 Issue of KINEMA

KINEMA AT TWENTY

The First Ten Years

When we launched our first issue in the Spring of 1993, we believed that film, TV and the audiovisual media, these multi-faceted forms of communication with enormous expressive potential and persuasive power, should be more often examined from a wider perspective – beyond national, ideological or generational restrictions. We realised that discussions of film and media in different continents and countries involve not only different languages but different philosophical premises and aesthetic concerns leading often to opposing conclusions.

The text above appeared in the Spring 2003 issue, when KINEMA, its editors and contributors commemorated the first successful decade of this journal. Today, not without a certain pride, we can look back at another ten fruitful years of KINEMA's existence.

Our contributions have come from countries including Australia, Canada, Czech Republic, Egypt, Germany, Hong Kong, Ireland, Italy, Malaysia, Norway, Poland, Singapore, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom and the United States. They are renowned scholars and professionals as well as graduate students and private researchers, lending our journal a wide spectrum of voices in a cross-cultural and cross-generational information exchange.

In 2008, KINEMA's website was thoroughly redesigned. New members joined our Editorial board. Sadly, we also lost KINEMA co-founder Gerald Pratley, who passed away in 2011 and Ron Holloway, one of our most dedicated contributors, who died in 2009.

We have tried to stay close to the goal we set ourselves two decades ago; in the years to come, we will try to maintain the integrity and quality of our journal. Above all, we thank you, our contributors and readers, for your unfailing encouragement and support.
