

Back Matter: About the Authors

Evan Cater

Evan is a fourth year PhD Candidate in History at the University of Waterloo. He specialises in the history of Modern Britain, specifically the era from 1914 to 1945. His areas of research interest are the history of the British Labour Party, Clement Attlee, Winston Churchill, and Britain's military campaigns of the two world wars. His dissertation examines the Labour Party's split between pacifist and pragmatic responses to British rearmament and the rise of fascism in the 1930s. He is currently Co-Teaching: Bond, Bowie, and Brexit, A History of Britain from 1945 to the New Millennium, at the University of Waterloo.

Nyatike Chuol

My name is Nyatike Chuol and I have just finished my Bachelor of Arts Degree at the University of Waterloo. My major is history and I have always been drawn to researching the stories of marginalized people. I was always under the impression that much of the historical sources only contained the narratives of the literate elite. My study of the Black Loyalists has shown that the sources are there, they are just waiting for someone with enough patience to examine them.

Megan Hamilton

Megan Hamilton is a SSHRC-funded graduate student in the Master of Arts program at the University of Waterloo. Her research focuses on Canadian war and society, particularly the Canadian experience of the Second World War. In 2021, she completed her Honours Bachelor of Arts degree in history at Wilfrid Laurier University, where she was also a research assistant at the Laurier Centre for Military, Strategic, and Disarmament Studies. She completed the first two years of her undergraduate degree at Okanagan College, in her hometown of Vernon, British Columbia. Aside from her academic pursuits, she is a group fitness instructor, a former National Team rhythmic gymnast, and an avid traveler.

Amanda Hooper

Amanda graduated from Ryerson University in June 2020 with a Bachelor of Arts Honours Degree in History. While at Ryerson, Amanda was awarded a Santander Universitäten Scholarship to study Nazi Germany at the Free University of Berlin. Amanda's current research as a MA student focuses on Holocaust memory in Berlin, including memoirs, memorials and sites, as well as Holocaust education efforts in Berlin since the city's reunification in 1990. Amanda is presently writing her Major Research Paper at the University of Waterloo and returns to the university in the fall to begin her Doctoral Studies.

Nicholas Morrison

Nicholas Morrison has just completed his third year of his Honours Bachelor of Arts degree at Wilfrid Laurier University with majors in History and Medieval Studies. His main areas of interest are in the social and cultural history of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe post-1945. He also enjoys learning about crime and culture in eighteenth-century Britain.

Emily Pazuk

I have just graduated from the University of Waterloo with a Bachelor of Arts in History and Business, including a Revolution, War and Upheaval Studies specialization. Through my time at the university, I had the opportunity to work with several excellent professors who encouraged me and helped me discover a passion in studying WWII Nazi Germany as well as American Cold War culture.

Angelika Rohrbaher

Graduated with a Bachelor of Arts, With Distinction – Dean’s Honour Roll, June 2020
Major: History

A goal set many years ago with a few starts and stops along the way while raising a family of four, working full time and combining studies with theatre, ballroom dancing and in general a busy life with all the trials, tribulations and triumphs life has to offer. Never losing sight that learning is a life-long journey.

Ryan Snopek

Until this past term (Winter 2021), I was an undergraduate in History at the University of Waterloo, with minors in Russian and East European Studies and Classical Studies. As of September, I will still be studying History at the University of Waterloo, but in the MA program. My chief interests are Russian language, culture, and history, though for my Masters thesis I will be lifting my eyes to the stars and researching the evolution of American as well as Russian perceptions of outer space and the future. With any luck, I will be finished my research before astronauts land on the Moon again.
